e-mail: yamihud@stern.nyu.edu

Course Description:

This course will present the theories and empirical evidence on corporate control transactions, the process of evaluating acquisition targets and its application in practice. Findings on the reaction of stock prices to information on control transactions will be used to analyze the effects of various policy options in such transactions. Strategies of acquisition will be studied as well as defensive measures against them, their purpose and their consequences. The class will combine lecture material, quantitative and qualitative analyses and discussions of relevant news. There will be an emphasis on fundamental concepts of valuation and other areas of corporate finance related to M&As.

Note: This is a demanding course in terms of rigor, homework and readings (it is partly quantitative). You need to have knowledge in finance, especially corporate finance.

Students are encouraged to bring up issues and events associated with material covered in class. Please coordinate with me in advance.

Grading: Homework - 35%, final exam - 65%. Class participation may help in marginal cases.

Reading material:

Class notes – will be distributed in class.

Textbook: Mergers, Acquisitions and Corporate Restructurings by Patrick Gaughan, John Wiley 2015, 6th edition. You can use the 2011 5th edition – readings marked by {{ ... }} or the 2007 4th edition, readings are marked by {...}.

Chapter numbers in [.] = skim, “esp.” = this is especially important. The book has a new edition, but you can buy this edition more cheaply on the Internet. If you get the new edition, pls see me about the relevant readings.

Case study: Cooper Industries (due on 13.8.2014), available from the Summer School Office.

Assignments: Two short written homework assignments + Copper case.

Homework assignments are done in groups of three. They should be e-mailed to yamihud@gmail.com before the class. The file name should be: “HW1 (or 2, 3), Paul, John, Mary” (last names of the three group members. For example: “Homework 1, Smith, John, Johannes.” The first line on the HW should include the full names of the group members.

Final exam: 31 August 2018
