Description

This seminar has the general aim of preparing students to write seminar papers and master theses from an interdisciplinary perspective by combining insights from lecturers with background in three fields – law, the humanities and economics. Our approach will be strongly practice-oriented with a major focus on leading students through the main steps of the research process. We also intend to initiate a discussion on what the term interdisciplinary means, on what possible forms it may have in research, and on the role it plays in the general framework of European Global Studies. Students are asked to write an interdisciplinary paper, to actively participate in classroom discussions, and to participate in the peer-review process by providing feedback on the work of their fellow students. The students will also benefit from timely feedback from the lecturers at various stages of the writing process, with the aim of helping them improve their academic writing skills.

Learning objectives

The seminar prepares students for writing an interdisciplinary master thesis and also gives them an opportunity to critically engage in an inter- or multidisciplinary dialogue in the broad area of European Global Studies:

- Students will become familiar with the concepts of disciplinarity and interdisciplinarity
- Students will learn how to navigate an interdisciplinary studies program
- Students will learn the advantages and difficulties of working with an interdisciplinary approach
- Students will learn to apply an interdisciplinary analysis to a particular topic
- Students will improve their academic writing skills

Grading

Students will be required to read the compulsory readings, submit homework, present a draft of their seminar paper in the class and provide oral feedback on other students' papers. Based on the feedback, students have to submit the final version of their seminar paper after the last session. Students will receive written feedback on their homework as well as oral feedback on their draft papers.

Presentation and discussion (week 9): 10%

Homework: 20%

Paper: 70%

Formal requirements for the paper

The paper should be no longer than 10 pages (excluding the table of contents and appendices, line spacing 1.5, Times New Roman, font size 12), and it must be written in English. The usual terms and conditions for scientific work (regarding the citation rules, etc.) apply. Additional writing requirements will be communicated during the seminar meetings.

According § 5.2 in conjunction with § 7.4 of the Program Guidelines to the MA European Global Studies the paper has to contain the following declaration on plagiarism:

“Hiermit bestätige ich mit meiner Unterschrift, dass meine Angaben über die bei der Abfassung meiner Arbeit benützten Hilfsmittel sowie über die mir zuteil gewordene Hilfe in jeder Hinsicht der Wahrheit entsprechen und vollständig sind. Ich habe § 21 der Studienordnung des Master European Global Studies und Abschnitt 6.6 der entsprechenden Wegleitung gelesen und bin mir der Konsequenzen eines solchen Handelns bewusst.”

Topic

This seminar is open to any topic which students would like to deal with. Questions that have been raised or left open in other courses offered in the Master of European Global Studies may provide a good starting point to develop an interesting research idea. In case of any questions regarding the search for topic/research question, students may contact the lecturers. Please inform the lecturers about your chosen topic no later than 27.03.2023, 14.00 (fill in the table “Topics” on ADAM).

Obligatory attendance

Students are required to attend each session of the seminar, thus increasing the benefits for all participants. Students who cannot attend a session for any reason should contact the lecturers beforehand.

Group allocation

Participants will be allocated to one of three groups, each of which will be the responsibility of one lecturer. The groups will be determined by week 3. If you have any questions, we ask that you write to the lecturer in charge of your group.
